I. INTRODUCTION

Defendants' opposition fails to rebut what the Plaintiff States have shown: Defendants should be enjoined from implementing the Citizenship Stripping Order on a nationwide basis. Anything less will result in direct, substantial, and irreparable harm to the Plaintiff States and their residents. It would also return the Nation to a shameful episode of our history in which entire classes of people born on American soil are treated as undeserving of inclusion in American civic life. That is the approach to citizenship embodied in Dred Scott that the people and the states rejected in ratifying the Fourteenth Amendment. It is "undeniable," the Supreme Court has said, that the Citizenship Clause's drafters "wanted to put citizenship beyond the power of any governmental unit to destroy." Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253, 263 (1967). The Plaintiff States ask the Court to honor the Fourteenth Amendment's promise and keep birthright citizenship beyond the power of the Administration to destroy.

II. ARGUMENT

A. The Court Has Authority to Declare the Citizenship Stripping Order Unlawful and Enjoin Its Implementation

Defendants first challenge the Plaintiff States’ standing and otherwise argue that the Citizenship Stripping Order should be shielded from judicial scrutiny. ECF No. 84 (Opp.) at 7. But the Plaintiff States have offered undisputed evidence that the Order will directly harm their legally protected interests, causing harm that is actual or imminent, “fairly traceable” to the Order, and redressable by an injunction. See Dep’t of Com. v. New York, 588 U.S. 752, 766-67 (2019). Specifically, the Plaintiff States’ sovereign and pecuniary interests will be immediately harmed as a direct result of the Order’s attempted denial of citizenship to thousands of the Plaintiff States’ residents. ECF No. 63 (States’ Mot.) at 6-9. Defendants wave away these harms as too indirect or self-inflicted, but their assertions ignore governing law and the facts presented. Nor do Defendants’ remaining procedural complaints hold water.

1 1. The Plaintiff States have standing to protect their sovereign interests

2 Defendants do not dispute that the Plaintiff States have a sovereign interest in protecting 3 their “power to create and enforce a legal code, both civil and criminal[.]” Alfred L. Snapp &
 4 Son, Inc. v. Puerto Rico, ex rel., Barez, 458 U.S. 592, 601 (1982); see also Maine v. Taylor, 477
 5 U.S. 131, 137 (1986) (“[A] State clearly has a legitimate interest in the continued enforceability 6 of its own statutes.”). Nor do they dispute that the Plaintiff States are injured if thousands of 7 residents are suddenly immune from state regulatory jurisdiction. Their only response is the 8 conclusory assertion that the Citizenship Stripping Order “has no effect on the states’ ability to 9 ‘create and enforce a legal code.’” Opp. at 11. But that is plainly wrong. Under the Citizenship 10 Stripping Order, thousands of state residents will be deemed not subject to the jurisdiction of the 11 United States, directly injuring the Plaintiff States’ “sovereign interest” in the retention of [their] 12 authority” to regulate individuals within their borders. Washington v. U.S. Food & Drug Admin., 13 108 F.4th 1163, 1176 (9th Cir. 2024).

14 Moreover, many of the Plaintiff States’ constitutions and laws rely on the settled meaning 15 of “United States citizen.” This includes laws requiring citizenship to vote in state elections, 16 serve on state juries, hold local offices, and serve as a police or corrections officers. See, e.g., 17 Wash. Const. art. VI, § 1 (right to vote in state elections); Ariz. Const. art. VII, § 2 (same); Or.
 18 Const. art. II, § 2 (same); Ill. Const. art III, § 1 (same); Wash. Rev. Code § 2.36.070 (juror 19 qualifications); Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 21-201(1) (same); Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 10.030(2) (same); 705
 20 Ill. Comp. Stat. 305/2(a) (same); Ariz. Const. art. V, § 2 (eligibility to hold certain state offices); 21 Ill. Const. art. V, § 3 (same); Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 181A.490, .520 .530 (qualifications for 22 police, corrections, and probation officers).

23 As a result of the Citizenship Stripping Order, the meaning of “citizen” for purposes of 24 these state laws is suddenly “endangered and rendered uncertain.” Ohio ex rel. Celebrenze v.
 25 U.S. Dep’t of Transp., 766 F.2d 228, 233 (6th Cir. 1985). If federal citizenship changes, the 26 Plaintiff States will need to re-evaluate these state laws and decide whether state voting rights,

1 state jury service, and more should turn on a state-specific definition of “citizenship.” See Texas
 2 v. United States, 787 F.3d 733, 749 (5th Cir. 2015) (federal “pressure to change state law in some 3 substantial way,” including “laws [that] exist for the administration of a state program,” 4 constitutes a sovereign injury); Wyoming ex rel. Crank v. United States, 539 F.3d 1236, 1242 5 (10th Cir. 2008) (federal action gives rise to sovereign standing where it “preempts state law” or 6 “interferes with [a state’s] ability to enforce its legal code”); Alaska v. U.S. Dep’t of Transp., 7 868 F.2d 441, 443-44 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (federal rule’s “preemptive effect” on “construction of 8 state laws” is sufficient for sovereign standing). The Plaintiff States easily have sovereign 9 standing here.

10 2. The Plaintiff States have standing to protect their pecuniary interests

11 Defendants’ attempt to downplay the financial and administrative harms to the Plaintiff 12 States fares no better. They contend that under United States v. Texas, 599 U.S. 670 (2023), any 13 injury is too “indirect” and “downstream.” They also make the laughable assertion that the 14 Plaintiff States’ harm is “self-inflicted” because the States may simply withdraw from critical 15 federal-state programs like Medicaid, CHIP, Title IV-E, and SSA’s Enumeration at Birth 16 program. Defendants are wrong for three reasons.

17 First, Defendants’ position cannot be squared with the Supreme Court’s decision in 18 Biden v. Nebraska, --- U.S. ----, 143 S. Ct. 2355, 2365-66 (2023). There, the Supreme Court held 19 that Missouri had standing to challenge federal action cancelling student loans because a state 20 entity serviced loans under contract with the federal government and Missouri alleged the 21 challenged action would cost it millions in fees “it otherwise would have earned under its 22 contract.” Id. at 2366. That harm was neither too indirect nor “self-inflicted,” even though 23 Missouri was under no obligation to contract with the federal government to service student 24 loans. See id. at 2365-66. The Plaintiff States here face the same situation. States’ Mot. at 6-9; 25 see also New York, 588 U.S. at 767 (holding that plaintiff states had standing where inclusion of 26 a citizenship question on the census would cause states to “lose out on federal funds that are

1 distributed on the basis of state population"); City & Cnty. of San Francisco v. U.S. Citizenship
 2 & Immigr. Servs., 981 F.3d 742, 754 (9th Cir. 2020) (holding that states had standing to challenge 3 federal action that would reduce the number of individuals eligible for federally backed programs
 4 like Medicaid). The cases Defendants cite, Opp. at 8-10, involved generalized assertions 5 regarding speculative future impacts and do not undercut the Plaintiff States' standing here.

6 Second, Defendants' "indirect, downstream" harms argument relies on a single footnote
 7 in Texas taken out of context. Id. In that case, Texas and Louisiana asserted standing to challenge 8 DHS's guidelines setting forth discretionary immigration enforcement priorities. Texas, 599 U.S.
 9 at 674. The Supreme Court held that the states' injuries in the form of increased costs to 10 incarcerate and provide social services to non-citizens were not redressable because the judiciary 11 could not interfere in the exercise of Article II executive discretion, which courts generally lack 12 meaningful standards to review. Id. at 677-80. The Court did not disturb the district court's 13 conclusion that the states suffered cognizable injuries and no one "dispute[d] that even one 14 dollar's worth of harm is traditionally enough to 'qualify as concrete injur[y] under Article III.'" Id.
 15 at 688 (Gorsuch, J., concurring) (citation omitted).

16 The Texas holding by its own terms was "narrow" and limited to the redressability 17 concerns of arrest and prosecutorial discretion policies. Id. at 683-84. Indeed, as the Ninth Circuit 18 has explained, Texas "pertained to prosecutorial inaction where the injury was not redressable" 19 and does not pose a barrier where, as here, an asserted injury is "more than merely speculative" 20 and will be redressed by the requested injunction. Nebraska v. Su, 121 F.4th 1, 13 n.5 (9th Cir.
 21 2024). Other courts likewise have refused to accept the federal government's overbroad reading 22 of footnote 3. See, e.g., Texas v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, & Explosives, 737 F.
 23 Supp. 3d 426, 435 (N.D. Tex. 2024); Gen. Land Office v. Biden, 722 F. Supp. 3d 710, 723-24 24 (S.D. Tex. 2024). The Court should reject Defendants' strained reading here, too.

25 Third, Defendants' boundless "self-inflicted injuries" argument, Opp. at 10, has been 26 squarely rejected by the Ninth Circuit. See California v. Azar, 911 F.3d 558, 573-74 (9th Cir.

1 2018) (rejecting argument that state plaintiffs' economic injuries "will be self-inflicted because 2 the states voluntarily chose to provide money for contraceptive care to its residents through state 3 programs" because "[c]ourts regularly entertain actions brought by states and municipalities that 4 face economic injury, even though those governmental entities theoretically could avoid the 5 injury by enacting new legislation"). The Supreme Court's decision in Clapper v. Amnesty
 6 International USA, 568 U.S. 398, 417-18 (2013), which Defendants quote out of context, does 7 not support their position, either. Clapper held that the domestic plaintiffs' voluntary actions 8 based on subjective fears of possible government surveillance of foreigners were insufficient to 9 confer standing because the alleged harm was not fairly traceable to the Government's purported
 10 foreign surveillance activities. Id. The Supreme Court's "too many links in the chain" traceability 11 holding does not suggest that plaintiffs can suffer cognizable harm only when a federal law or 12 directive compels their action, as Defendants argue.¹ Opp. at 10-11.

13 Defendants' arguments, if accepted, would seal the courthouse doors shut to nearly all 14 plaintiffs. There is simply no way to reconcile Defendants' arguments with precedent. See 15 Nebraska, 143 S. Ct. at 2365-66 (lost fees sufficient despite Missouri's choice to enter student 16 loan market); New York, 588 U.S. at 766-67 (lost funding sufficient without concern for whether 17 states could withdraw from federally backed funding programs); City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 18 981 F.3d at 754 (same); see also City & Cnty. of San Francisco v. U.S. Citizenship & Immigr.
 19 Servs., 944 F.3d 773, 788 (9th Cir. 2019) (rejecting DHS's reliance on Clapper where state 20 plaintiffs demonstrated disenrollment in public programs and rising administrative costs). The 21 questions the Court must answer are whether the Plaintiff States will suffer cognizable harm and 22 whether that harm will be redressed by an injunction. The answer to both is yes.

26

¹ Defendants also ignore that the Plaintiff States are obligated by law to care for wards within their custody. By inflicting pecuniary injuries on the Plaintiff States' programs, the Citizenship Stripping Order injures the Plaintiff States' sovereign interests in caring for children within their custody.

1 3. The Plaintiff States have standing to bring challenges under the Citizenship
2 Clause

3 Defendants next make a much bolder claim, arguing that the Plaintiff States can never 4 have standing to assert claims under the Citizenship Clause. Opp. at 11-12. The Fourteenth 5 Amendment's text and history show otherwise.

6 The Citizenship Clause renders individuals born in the United States "citizens of the 7 United States and of the State wherein they reside." U.S Const. amend. XIV, § 1 (emphasis 8 added). This text squarely implicates the states, and the history of the Citizenship Clause is in 9 accord. In ratifying the Fourteenth Amendment, the states actively agreed to nationalize and 10 constitutionalize the baseline rule of birthright citizenship. See, e.g., Michael D. Ramsey, 11 Originalism and Birthright Citizenship, 109 Geo. L.J. 405, 417 (2020) ("The Amendment also, 12 by its plain language, nationalized the idea of citizenship: state citizenship was linked directly to 13 national citizenship, and states would not have power to deny state citizenship to national citizens 14 living within the state."); Kantor v. Wellesley Galleries, Ltd., 704 F.2d 1088, 1090 (9th Cir.
15 1983) (recognizing that the Fourteenth Amendment "broadened the national scope of the 16 Government under the Constitution by causing citizenship of the United States to be paramount 17 and dominant instead of being subordinate and derivative [to state citizenship]") (quoting 18 Colgate v. Harvey, 296 U.S. 404, 427-28 (1935), overruled on other grounds, Madden v. Kentucky, 309 U.S. 83 (1940)). Because the Citizenship Clause's meaning directly affects the 19 states, the Plaintiff States have a direct "stake in the outcome of the controversy." Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 498 (1975).²

23 2 Defendants cite Warth, but fail to note that the quoted portion, which purports to limit plaintiffs from 24 raising claims that implicate the rights of others, is not part of the Article III analysis but rather a "limitation[]" that 25 is "essentially [a] matter[] of judicial self-governance . . ." 422 U.S. at 500. Since Warth, the Supreme Court has 26 clarified that so-called "prudential standing" is in tension with the principle that "a federal court's obligation to hear and decide cases within its jurisdiction is virtually unflagging." Lexmark Int'l, Inc. v. Static Control Components, Inc., 572 U.S. 118, 125-26 (2014) (cleaned up); see also Sprint Commc'ns, Inc. v. Jacobs, 571 U.S. 69, 77 (2013) ("Federal courts, it was early and famously said, have 'no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given.'") (citation omitted).

1 Defendants' cited cases stand at most for the principle that states cannot generally bring 2 parens patriae claims against the federal government. See Opp. at 12-13.³ But the Plaintiff States 3 are not bringing parens claims here, and the law is clear that state standing may exist against the 4 federal government where the state is not proceeding as parens patriae. For example, in South
 5 Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 323-24 (1966), the Court explained "at the outset" that 6 South Carolina would lack standing to challenge the Voting Rights Act of 1965 if it brought suit 7 as "the parent of its citizens." But the Court did not dismiss South Carolina's lawsuit for lack of 8 standing—it evaluated the state's Fifteenth Amendment claims on the merits. Id. at 325-37. That 9 was so even though the Fifteenth Amendment speaks to "[t]he right of citizens of the United 10 States to vote," and does not expressly assign rights to the states. U.S. Const. amend. XV, § 1.
 11 But, of course, the challenged federal action did affect South Carolina—it "temporarily barred 12 [the state] from enforcing the [literacy test] portion of its voting laws." Katzenbach, 383 U.S. at 13 319. Accordingly, South Carolina had standing. Id. at 334-37.

14 The same is true of Haaland v. Brackeen, 599 U.S. 255 (2023). See Opp. at 12-13. In 15 Brackeen, Texas brought an equal protection challenge to the Indian Child Welfare Act. Id. at 16 294-95. As Defendants correctly cite, the Court held that Texas could not "assert equal protection 17 claims on behalf of its citizens" as "parens patriae." Id. (citing Snapp, 458 U.S. at 610 n.16).
 18 But the analysis did not end there. The Court separately considered whether Texas had "alleged 19 costs" that were "fairly traceable" to the challenged federal statute. Id. at 296. Although Texas 20 failed to make an adequate showing of financial harm to the state, that analysis would have been 21 irrelevant if states never have standing to bring Fourteenth Amendment claims. The rule is that 22 parens patriae claims are off limits where states do not identify a separate harm to their own
 23 interests, but claims based on a "direct pocketbook injury" are fair game. Id. Because the Plaintiff 24 States have demonstrated sovereign injuries and concrete, direct funding losses as a result of the

 26 ³ Of course, the Plaintiff States' considerable evidence of the harms to their residents from the Citizenship Stripping Order are squarely relevant to the Court's consideration of the "balance of equities" and the "public interest," two mandatory Winter factors that Defendants essentially ignore. See Opp. at 44.

1 Order—tens of thousands of dollars that will be lost under contracts with SSA and millions in 2 lost Medicaid, CHIP, and Title IV-E funding—the Plaintiff States have standing.

3 4. The Plaintiff States can obtain declaratory and injunctive relief directly 4 under the Fourteenth Amendment and the INA

5 The final procedural barrier Defendants assert is a passing argument that the Plaintiff 6 States “lack a cause of action.” Opp. at 15-17. But it is well established that plaintiffs who have 7 demonstrated Article III standing, including states, can obtain prospective declaratory and 8 injunctive relief to prevent unlawful and ultra vires federal action that violates the Constitution
 9 and federal statutes. See, e.g., City & Cnty. of San Francisco v. Trump, 897 F.3d 1225, 1233-35 10 (9th Cir. 2018) (affirming judgment in favor of local government plaintiffs on ground that 11 Executive Order was an unconstitutional violation of the separation of powers); Washington v. Trump, 847 F.3d 1151, 1164-65 (9th Cir. 2017) (denying motion to stay injunction that barred 12 Executive Order’s enforcement or implementation where Washington was likely to prevail on 13 constitutional due process claims); Karnoski v. Trump, No. C17-1297-MJP, 2017 WL 6311305, 14 at *7-9 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 11, 2017) (enjoining enforcement of President Trump’s Presidential 15 Memorandum excluding transgender individuals from the military where Washington and 16 individual plaintiffs asserted claims under the First and Fifth Amendments).

17 Indeed, “[t]he ability to sue to enjoin unconstitutional actions by state and federal officers 18 is the creation of courts of equity, and reflects a long history of judicial review of illegal 19 executive action.” Armstrong v. Exceptional Child Ctr., Inc., 575 U.S. 320, 327 (2015); see also 20 Sierra Club v. Trump, 929 F.3d 670, 694, 696-97 (9th Cir. 2019) (“The Supreme Court has ‘long 21 held that federal courts may in some circumstances grant injunctive relief against’ federal 22 officials violating federal law.”) (quoting Armstrong, 575 U.S. at 326-27). The Court likewise 23 has authority to declare even duly enacted laws unconstitutional under the Citizenship Clause.
 24 See Afroyim, 387 U.S. at 254-67 (federal statute that stripped citizenship under certain 25 circumstances violated the Citizenship Clause).

1 None of Defendants' authority, see Opp. at 15-17, stands for the extraordinary 2 proposition that the Court is powerless to review the legality of the Citizenship Stripping Order.
 3 The only case Defendants cite, DeVillier v. Texas, 601 U.S. 285, 291 (2024), dealt with the 4 availability of a cause of action for damages against the federal government under the Fifth 5 Amendment's Takings Clause. It said nothing to suggest that plaintiffs cannot seek declaratory 6 and injunctive relief—equitable relief—to prevent constitutional violations. Id. at 292. It in fact 7 recognized the opposite. Id. That makes sense because it is “beyond question that the federal 8 judiciary retains the authority to adjudicate constitutional challenges to executive action.” 9 Washington, 847 F.3d at 1164.

10 For the same reasons, the INA provision that allows individuals already denied certain 11 discrete benefits to pursue declaratory judgment lawsuits, 8 U.S.C. § 1503, presents no barrier 12 to the Plaintiff States' claims. Defendants cite no authority for the proposition that this provision, 13 which says individuals “may” bring a declaratory judgment action, somehow shields from 14 judicial review the Executive Branch's rewriting of the Fourteenth Amendment to declare entire 15 classes of U.S.-born individuals to be non-citizens. Opp. at 16-17. And even when provisions of 16 the INA purport to restrict judicial review, the Supreme Court has interpreted limitations 17 narrowly. See Dep't of Homeland Sec. v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 591 U.S. 1, 19 (2020).
 18 Courts can and do entertain challenges to executive action that violates the constitution and 19 federal statutory provisions. See Trump v. Hawaii, 585 U.S. 667, 683 (2018) (reviewing states' 20 claims that presidential restriction on immigration violated INA); Sierra Club, 929 F.3d at 699 21 (“Here, no statute expressly makes Plaintiffs' claims reviewable, but, as we have explained, 22 Plaintiffs do have an adequate remedy in a court: an equitable cause of action for injunctive 23 relief.”); Murphy Co. v. Biden, 65 F.4th 1122, 1128-31 (9th Cir. 2023) (discussing authority to 24 review executive action that is ultra vires and violates federal statute). The Court should do the 25 same here.

1 B. The Plaintiff States Are Extremely Likely to Succeed on the Merits

2 The plain text of the Fourteenth Amendment and the INA guarantee citizenship to all 3 born in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction, regardless of one's race, ethnicity, 4 alienage, or the immigration status of one's parents. The Citizenship Clause's history confirms 5 this understanding. See States' Mot. at 10-11. Binding precedent confirms this understanding.
 6 United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 693 (1898); see also Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 7 211-15 (1982). And every branch of government has confirmed this understanding for the past 8 150 years. See 8 U.S.C. § 1401; Legislation Denying Citizenship at Birth to Certain Children
 9 Born in the United States, 19 Op. O.L.C. 340, 342 (1995); States' Mot. at 9-14. Defendants' 10 counterarguments are meritless.

11 1. The Citizenship Stripping Order is blatantly unconstitutional

12 Defendants' core contention is that children born to undocumented and many legal 13 immigrants are not actually "subject to the jurisdiction" of the United States, and thus not entitled 14 to birthright citizenship, under a theory never before adopted by any court. They are wrong as a 15 matter of constitutional text and history, and their arguments are foreclosed by the Supreme 16 Court's decision in Wong Kim Ark.

17 As the Supreme Court explained in Wong Kim Ark, "[t]he real object" of including the 18 "subject to the jurisdiction thereof" language was "to exclude, by the fewest and fittest words 19 (besides children of members of the Indian tribes, standing in a peculiar relation to the national 20 government, unknown to the common law), the two classes of cases . . . recognized [as] 21 exceptions to the fundamental rule of citizenship by birth within the country." 169 U.S. at 682.
 22 Those two classes are "children born of alien enemies in hostile occupation, and children of 23 diplomatic representatives of a foreign state[.]" Id. The Court explained at length how in each of 24 these cases, the United States' exercise of sovereign power was limited either in fact, as a matter 25 of common law and practice, or in the case of Native American tribes, as a result of their tribal 26 sovereignty. Id. at 683 (discussing United States v. Rice, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 246 (1819))

1 (regarding hostile invasion and the suspension of sovereign power over occupied territory), and 2 Schooner Exch. v. McFaddon, 11 U.S. (7 Cranch) 116, 136 (1812) (explaining why diplomats 3 are not subject to the United States' jurisdiction even though the Nation's sovereign power is 4 necessary and absolute in its territory)); see also Ramsey, Originalism, supra, at 436-58 5 (detailing mid-Nineteenth Century understanding of what it meant to be “subject to the 6 jurisdiction” of the United States).

7 The Supreme Court, reviewing many of the authorities Defendants now cite, concluded 8 that “[t]he fourteenth amendment affirms the ancient and fundamental rule of citizenship by birth 9 within the territory, in the allegiance and under the protection of the country, including all 10 children here born of resident aliens[.]” Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. at 693. The only individuals 11 understood not to be subject to the United States’ jurisdiction at birth were children born to 12 diplomats or enemies during hostile occupation, those born on foreign ships, and those born to 13 members of Native American tribes. Id. The Court made clear, in language that forecloses 14 Defendants’ modern-day interpretation:

15 The amendment, in clear words and in manifest intent, includes the children born 16 within the territory of the United States of all other persons, of whatever race or 17 color, domiciled within the United States. Every citizen or subject of another 18 country, while domiciled here, is within the allegiance and the protection, and 19 consequently subject to the jurisdiction, of the United States. His allegiance to the 20 United States is direct and immediate, and, although but local and temporary, 21 continuing only so long as he remains within our territory, is . . . “strong enough to 22 make a natural subject, for, if he hath [a child] here, that [child] is a natural-born 23 subject”; and his child . . . “[i]f born in the country, is as much a citizen as the 24 natural-born child of a citizen”

25 Id. (cleaned up). The Court reiterated that “[i]t can hardly be denied that an alien is completely 26 subject to the political jurisdiction of the country in which he resides[.]” Id. “Independently of a residence with intention to continue such residence; independently of any domiciliation; independently of the taking of any oath of allegiance, or of renouncing any former allegiance,” the Court stated, “it is well known that by the public law an alien, or a stranger born, for so long

1 a time as he continues within the dominions of a foreign government, owes obedience to the 2 laws of that government[.]” Id. at 693-94. That is, such persons are subject to the United States’ 3 jurisdiction.

4 The Court’s reasoning is complete and its holding dispositive. None of the individuals 5 targeted in the Citizenship Stripping Order today enjoy any type of immunity from general laws
 6 or represent another sovereign nation or political entity. The Defendants’ “surplusage” argument, 7 Opp. at 19-20, is accordingly resolved by simply reading the Fourteenth Amendment’s plain 8 text. Without “subject to the jurisdiction thereof,” the Citizenship Clause would extend to the 9 narrow categories that have long been recognized by courts, Congress, and the Executive to be 10 exempt from the Citizenship Clause’s grant of birthright citizenship.

11 Defendants nonetheless attempt to import two new non-textual requirements, complete 12 “allegiance” and “lawful domicile,” by chaining together selective quotes from cases unrelated 13 to the interpretation of the Citizenship Clause. Opp. at 20-25. But allegiance and lawful domicile 14 appear nowhere in the Fourteenth Amendment. McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U.S. 1, 27 (1892) 15 (“The framers of the constitution employed words in their natural sense; and, where they are 16 plain and clear, resort to collateral aids to interpretation is unnecessary, and cannot be indulged 17 in to narrow or enlarge the text”). And with respect to the requirement of being “subject to 18 the jurisdiction thereof,” it was clear at ratification that this phrase included all non-citizens who 19 were physically present in the United States, absent the very narrow exceptions recognized at 20 common law and noted above. Wong Kim Ark interpreted the Citizenship Clause’s language and 21 directly forecloses Defendants’ argument. 169 U.S. at 693.

22 Nor do those non-textual requirements comport with the Citizenship Clause’s history.
 23 Illegally imported enslaved individuals were not “lawfully domiciled” in the United States under 24 Defendants’ interpretation, yet there is no question that the Citizenship Clause applied to their 25 children. See, e.g., Gabriel J. Chin & Paul Finkelman, Birthright Citizenship, Slave Trade
 26 Legislation, and the Origins of Federal Immigration Regulation, 54 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 2215,

1 2250 (2021) (“This history demonstrates that there were clearly ‘illegal aliens,’ both free
 2 migrants banned under the 1803 law and illegally imported slaves, in the United States before 3 and during the consideration of the Fourteenth Amendment.”); Gerald L. Neuman, Back to Dred
 4 Scott?, 24 San Diego L. Rev. 485, 497-99 (1987) (detailing the history of enslaved individuals 5 who were imported illegally and recognizing that the Fourteenth Amendment was intended to 6 grant citizenship to all native-born individuals of African descent).⁴

7 Defendants also turn to Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884), the Slaughter-House Cases, 8 83 U.S. 36 (1872), and a slew of nonbinding authorities that predate Wong Kim Ark and Plyler
 9 to try to read extra requirements into the Citizenship Clause. Opp. at 20-21, 28-30. Defendants’ 10 arguments re-hash well-trodden and widely rejected bases for attempting to adopt exclusionary 11 views of the Citizenship Clause. See, e.g., Ramsey, Originalism, supra, at 436-58 (analyzing 12 common arguments for reading “subject to the jurisdiction thereof” narrowly with respect to 13 undocumented immigrants and concluding they are all contrary to the Fourteenth Amendment’s 14 text and history). In short, Wong Kim Ark cemented the meaning of the Citizenship Clause in a 15 manner consistent with Elk. See Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. at 682 (recognizing that Elk “concerned 16 only members of the Indian tribes within the United States and had no tendency to deny 17 citizenship to children born in the United States of foreign parents . . . not in the diplomatic 18 service of a foreign country”); accord Ramsey, Originalism, supra, at 419-20 (discussing Elk).
 19 The Supreme Court likewise dismissed the dicta in the Slaughter-House Cases that suggested a 20 narrow view of the Citizenship Clause. Id. at 677-80.

21 Nowhere in Wong Kim Ark did the Supreme Court recognize a “lawful domicile” or 22 “exclusive allegiance” requirement for one to be subject to the United States’ jurisdiction.
 23 Indeed, the dissent made similar arguments to those Defendants offer today. Id. at 729 (Fuller, 24 C.J., dissenting) (“If children born in the United States were deemed presumptively and 25 generally citizens, this was not so when they were born of aliens whose residence was merely 26 ⁴ Available at: <https://digital.sandiego.edu/sdlr/vol24/iss2/8/>.

1 temporary, either in fact or in point of law.”). Those arguments were rejected, and the Citizenship
 2 Clause’s broad scope was established. Id. at 694.

3 Defendants further point to the Civil Rights Act of 1866, but that Act confirms that they 4 are wrong. The Act provided that “[a]ll persons born in the United States, and not subject to any 5 foreign Power, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States, without distinction of 6 color.” Civil Rights Act of 1866 § 1; see Cong. Globe, 39th Cong., 1st Sess. 474, 498 (1866).
 7 All involved in its passage understood that this language included the children of immigrants, 8 regardless of their background. When one senator asked whether this language “would have the 9 effect of naturalizing the children of Chinese and Gypsies born in this country[.]” for example, 10 Senator Trumbull, the Act’s author, responded, “Undoubtedly.” Cong. Globe, 39th Cong., 1st 11 Sess. 498.⁵ This was true even though, at the time, Chinese immigrants could not become 12 naturalized U.S. citizens and “Gypsies” were, if present, likely present unlawfully. See Garrett 13 Epps, The Citizenship Clause: A “Legislative History,” 60 Am. U. L. Rev. 331, 350-52 (2010); 14 Ramsey, Originalism, supra, at 451-52 (discussing 1866 Act).

15 Finally, even if the Civil Rights Act of 1866 did not include immigrants in its citizenship
 16 clause—and it did—the Fourteenth Amendment’s Citizenship Clause certainly confers 17 citizenship to the children subject to the Citizenship Stripping Order. All involved in its passage 18 understood that the Citizenship Clause guaranteed citizenship to virtually all U.S.-born children 19 regardless of the race or citizenship of their parents. Indeed, it was introduced to confirm that 20 “every person born within the limits of the United States, and subject to their jurisdiction, is by 21 virtue of natural law and national law a citizen of the United States.” Cong. Globe, 39th Cong., 22 1st Sess. 2890 (statement of Sen. Howard). Senator Cowan, notably, argued against ratification 23 because “[i]f the mere fact of being born in the country confers that right,” of citizenship, then

 26

⁵ Defendants stitch the legislative history of the Civil Rights Act of 1866 and the Fourteenth Amendment’s ratification debates together to argue that Senator Trumbull equated being “subject to our jurisdiction” with “owing allegiance solely to the United States.” Opp. at 21-22. Senator Trumbull made the latter statement in explaining why Native American tribes are not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, not as a blanket statement about the Citizenship Clause. See Cong. Globe, 39th Cong., 1st Sess. 2894; see also Ramsey, Originalism, supra, at 449.

1 the children of parents “who have a distinct, independent government of their own,” “who owe 2 [the state] no allegiance,” and who would “settle as trespassers” would also be citizens. Id. at 3 2891; id. at 2890 (statement of Sen. Cowan) (“Is the child of the Chinese immigrant in California
 4 a citizen? Is the child of a Gypsy born in Pennsylvania a citizen? . . . Have they any more rights 5 than a sojourner in the United States?”). All agreed that Senator Cowan properly understood the 6 Citizenship Clause’s broad scope, and the Senate adopted that broad language anyway. See id.
 7 at 2891 (Senator Conness confirming that the Clause as proposed would provide citizenship to 8 “children begotten of Chinese parents in California,” because the 1866 Act made that the case 9 by law and “it is proposed to incorporate the same provision in the fundamental instrument of 10 the nation” and “declare that the children of all parentage whatever . . . should be regarded and 11 treated as citizens of the United States.”).

12 Ultimately, the Citizenship Clause was adopted to “remove[] all doubt as to what persons 13 are or are not citizens of the United States.” Id. (statement of Sen. Howard). Wong Kim Ark 14 confirmed the Citizenship Clause’s proper interpretation, and there is still no doubt today. The 15 Plaintiff States are likely to succeed on the merits.

16 2. The Citizenship Stripping Order independently violates the INA

17 Defendants argue that the Plaintiff States’ INA claim fails “because [it] depend[s] on the 18 plaintiffs’ incorrect construction of the Fourteenth Amendment.” Opp. at 40. But they miss the 19 point. Because Congress “employ[ed] a term of art obviously transplanted from another legal 20 source,” the INA brought “the old soil with it.” George v. McDonough, 596 U.S. 740, 746 (2022)
 21 (cleaned up). The “old soil” was, and is, the established understanding of the Citizenship Clause 22 set forth in Wong Kim Ark. See States’ Mot. at 14-15. Because Defendants do not dispute that 23 the Citizenship Stripping Order attempts to exclude a new category of individuals from the 24 Citizenship Clause’s reach based on a theory that has never been accepted, it is contrary to the 25 INA as properly construed. The Plaintiff States are likely to prevail on their INA claim.

1 C. The Remaining Injunction Factors Decisively Favor the Plaintiff States

2 The irreparable harm, public interest, and equities factors compel an injunction.
 3 Defendants offer no serious response regarding the extensive harms the Citizenship Stripping 4 Order will cause to the Plaintiff States and their residents. Defendants suggest merely that the 5 operational chaos and financial losses the Plaintiff States will suffer “are not directly attributable 6 to the EO” and muse that there might be another way to recover certain lost reimbursements.
 7 Opp. at 41. They are wrong on all accounts.

8 The Plaintiff States’ harms flow directly from the unilateral reclassification of thousands 9 of individuals as non-citizens—individuals whose citizenship the Plaintiff States must verify to 10 be reimbursed under longstanding programs like Medicaid, CHIP, and Title IV-E. See States’ 11 Mot. at 7-9, 16-19. Likewise, the Plaintiff States are integral participants in SSA’s Enumeration 12 at Birth program. See id. at 8, 17-18. It is not speculative that the Plaintiff States will lose money 13 under their existing agreements with SSA; thousands of children born in each Plaintiff State will 14 be deemed ineligible for SSNs, and as a result, the Plaintiff States will not be able to receive 15 SSA payments for processing their birth data. Id. Despite these direct harms, Defendants 16 nowhere acknowledge that money damages are not recoverable against sovereign defendants 17 like the federal government. See id. at 15-16. Nor do they rebut the overwhelming evidence that 18 the Plaintiff States will have to expend significant resources to update and modify systems used 19 to verify citizenship and immigration status now for the programs the Plaintiff States administer.
 20 See id. at 18-19.

21 Defendants instead invite the Court to grant them unchecked power to determine 22 citizenship by executive fiat, invoking the federal government’s “broad, undoubted power over 23 the subject of immigration and the status of aliens.” Opp. at 44 (citing Arizona v. United States, 24 567 U.S. 387, 394 (2012)).⁶ But this is not a case that threatens a “severe intrusion into [a] core

 26 ⁶ Defendants assert that the Court should dismiss the President, Opp. at 45, but the Supreme Court has recognized that “the president’s actions may [] be reviewed for constitutionality.” Franklin v. Massachusetts, 505
 U.S. 788, 801 (1992).

1 executive authority.” Opp. at 44. It is a case about citizenship rights that are intentionally beyond 2 the President’s authority. And as the Supreme Court has confirmed, “[t]he very nature of our 3 free government makes it completely incongruous to have a rule of law under which a group of 4 citizens temporarily in office can deprive another group of citizens of their citizenship.” Afroyim, 5 387 U.S. at 268. Neither the equities nor the public interest favor allowing the Defendants to 6 wage a war on the citizenship of children born on American soil. See E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant 7 v. Biden, 993 F.3d 640, 679 (9th Cir. 2021) (“[T]he public has an interest in ensuring that the 8 ‘[laws] enacted by [their] representatives are not imperiled by executive fiat.’”)(cleaned up).

9 D. A Nationwide Injunction Is Required for Complete Relief

10 Absent an injunction preserving the 157-year-old status quo nationwide, the Plaintiff 11 States’ ultimate remedy—requiring the federal government to recognize U.S. citizens as 12 citizens—would lose its meaning. Defendants do not dispute that the Court has discretion to 13 fashion an appropriate injunction, including a nationwide injunction, as necessary to provide the 14 Plaintiff States with complete relief. Opp. at 44-45 (citing Madsen v. Women’s Health Ctr., Inc., 15 512 U.S. 753, 765 (1994)). Nor could they. The Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit have 16 confirmed as much. See Trump v. Int’l Refugee Assistance Project, 582 U.S. 571, 579, 581 17 (2017) (allowing nationwide injunction as to enforcement of portions of Executive Order that 18 exceeded presidential authority); Doe #1 v. Trump, 957 F.3d 1050, 1069 (9th Cir. 2020) 19 (declining to stay nationwide injunction and explaining that “there is no bar” against such 20 injunctions “when it is appropriate”) (quoting Bresgal v. Brock, 843 F.2d 1163, 1170 (9th Cir.
 21 1987)).

22 Defendants’ request for a more limited injunction ignores the practical realities that 23 would accompany a geographically checkered rule of birthright citizenship and glosses over the 24 extraordinary nature of the Citizenship Stripping Order. Nationwide injunctions are particularly 25 warranted where, as here, the fact that individuals can and do move between states exposes the 26 plaintiffs to irreparable harm. See, e.g., E. Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 993 F.3d at 680-81 (holding

1 that district court did not abuse discretion in entering nationwide injunction of rule that conflicted 2 with the INA where plaintiff organizations would be harmed by losing clients who may have 3 entered the United States at a location not covered under a geographically limited injunction); 4 HIAS, Inc. v. Trump, 985 F.3d 309, 327 (4th Cir. 2021) (affirming nationwide injunction 5 prohibiting enforcement of Executive Order where organizations “place[d] refugees throughout 6 the country” and demonstrated irreparable harm from the order taking effect in other 7 jurisdictions). If individuals born in other states are deemed non-citizens under the Order and 8 move to the Plaintiff States, the Plaintiff States will suffer the same irreparable injuries to their 9 sovereign interests and substantial financial losses and administrative burdens that they would 10 without any injunction at all.

11 III. CONCLUSION

12 The Plaintiff States request that the Court issue a nationwide preliminary injunction 13 barring the Citizenship Stripping Order’s enforcement or implementation.
